CDS.Multivariate analysis of clinical and imaging predictors of successful ablation for atrial tachycardia originating from the cavotricuspid isthmus. The purpose of this study was to analyze multivariate clinical and imaging predictors of successful ablation for atrial tachycardia (AT) originating from the cavotricuspid isthmus (CTI). Electrophysiological mapping and radiofrequency catheter ablation were performed at the CTI in 52 patients with AT. The CTI was located within the isthmus between the superior vena cava and the tricuspid valve in 22 patients and within the right atrium in 30. Multiple clinical or imaging predictors of successful ablation. Of the patients 45 (87%) had no structural heart disease and 7 (13%) had structural heart disease. The procedural endpoint was AT termination in 44 (85%) of the patients; successful ablation was achieved in 38 (73%). Logistic regression analysis showed that female gender, highly delayed activation at the CTI with conduction of the early activation to the retrograde atrial activation, and a long isthmus between the CTI and the right ventricle (RV) were associated with a higher probability of successful ablation. In addition, echocardiographic parameters that evaluate AT perpetuation, such as maximal wall thickness at the CTI, and the localization of the CTI relative to the tricuspid valve were also 0cc13bf012

The truth about pollution Pollution is a major problem – not just in India but across the world, but there are a few simple things we can do to decrease it. We must understand the truth about pollution first, and then take action. Remember, water pollution is not only an issue for India. The rivers and lakes in the United States, South Korea, China, Japan, Australia, and elsewhere are also polluted. What you can do about it There are many ways that you can keep pollution under control. We must realise that the main source of pollution is us: ourselves! If we use our power to reduce pollution, then the impact that we make on the environment will be much more limited. Do not pollute. You must talk to your employer or work organisation about their policy on water pollution. If the water is coming from your home then the first thing you must do is to make sure that your tap is never used to water the plants. These plants take up a lot of water (just for growing!). Rather than watering all your plants with tap water, use purified drinking water. This costs you nothing, and you save water for people who may need it. When washing dishes, use purified water. It is a "no-brainer" when it comes to saving water. Never use the tap to water plants. It is ok for pets if there is a tap in your pet's cage, but do not use the tap to water your plants, and especially do not use purified water. Don't use chemicals in your home. Use natural soap and detergent. Avoid water wastage. We must reduce the amount of water that we use. This includes not over-using the water from your tap. Always make sure that you use less. Do not build any more homes. If you have a home, do not add another person to that home. Adding a person to a home in India will mean a corresponding increase in the amount of water that is used to water plants in that home. Use a shower, not a bath. Avoid plastic water bottles. Use a ceramic jug, metal bottle, or even a stainless steel container. Do
