Hi, this is SOB here again, with the continuation of our review of Gods Basement's Action RPG, "The Curse Of The Elden Ring." After a couple of months of playing the game, now I want to give you guys my honest opinion of the game. As I mentioned before, this is the continuation of my previous review, and if you want to have a look at that one, please click here, otherwise I will continue. So, what about this game, you might ask, is there really anything that makes it stand out from other RPGs? Well, I have to say it does stand out, mainly because this game features graphics similar to the ones in a visual novel, mixed with a plot similar to a fairy tale. However, having said that, this game does use fantasy elements to make it easy to imagine something similar to a "Monster Hunter"-like world where monsters can give you quests, and you could find useful items as rewards. You start with the character in a certain place, either in the field or in a dungeon, and depending on the type of map you get, you can choose your character's character class. There are four different classes, including Warriors, Mages, Wizards, and Priests. Each class has their own strengths, weaknesses, and strengths and weaknesses of skills, as well as their own unique strengths and weaknesses of equipment. The game also features six different character types that you can unlock by playing the game, and each one of these classes has a different name, just like the genres of games. Regardless of your class, the only thing you need to use is a weapon, a shield, and a backpack in order to get started. From then on, you will be able to explore the vast world of Gods Basement's RPG, as well as get useful items, talk to people, and train your character. At the same time, you can choose to save your data to an online account, and you can also create your own character. Well, we will see what else there is later on, bff6bb2d33
