The code: x = [i for i in range(12)] According to the docs: If the expression is a generator expression, it must evaluate in place and produce a sequence whose length is determined at the time the expression is evaluated. But if I run the code in interactive python console: >>> x = [i for i in range(12)] [0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11] Am I missing something here? A: Because x is the name of the variable containing the value, it is not a generator, it is a list comprehension. You cannot change the name of a variable with an assignment statement, so it is not the same name as the built-in function list. >>> x = list(range(12)) >>> y = list(range(12)) >>> x.append(1) >>> y [0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11] >>> x [0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11] To demonstrate the difference, you can append to the variable x: >>> x = [i for i in range(12)] >>> x.append(1) >>> x [0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11] If you want to know what the code does, it just returns the values of the range(12) function, and applies a list comprehension to it. Note that some languages, like Python, have a feature called list comprehensions that allow you to write equivalent code with a list comprehension instead of a regular for loop. In the documentation: "WicketApplication.run() runs in a dedicated thread, calling public methods in the "Application" class. If you have other thread running somewhere, you have to be especially careful to check that you call run() from the main (UI) thread only" A: SLF4J is included in the normal classpath. For me this works in eclipse without any special configuration. 1952 Texas Tech Red Raiders football team The 1952 Texas Tech Red Raiders football team was an American football team that represented Texas Tech University as an independent in 1952. In their fourth season under head coach Spud Jordan, the Red Raiders compiled a 5-3-1 record and outscored opponents by a total of 267 to 165. The team played its home games in the new Erceel D.
