Teen inspires others with cancer survival ASHEVILLE – One local girl faced a tough fight, but her positive attitude drove her to another hurdle. Fifteen-year-old Jasmine Chavis of Asheville was given a life-threatening blood cancer diagnosis in November when she was 8. Since then, she has been fighting the blood cancer that has threatened to take her life. Jasmine faces up to 20 treatments and a host of complications that her survival depends on the availability of new medical technologies that can come out of the original research she has funded. She recently received a $20,000 grant that will fund a study on a new treatment at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, which is not widely available outside the original research site.

Jasmine's dream of earning college credit while in high school and pursuing a career as a nurse has helped keep her spirits up while she copes with the pain of her treatment. She is also a member of a handful of college-age cancer patients in North Carolina who are participating in a program that gives them an early start on their life after cancer. “She is an inspiration to people,” said Ronda Bryson, an 18-year-old Wilkesboro High School student who is also a victim of cancer. Jasmine and Bryson are two of 25 young cancer survivors as part of the Young Survivors at UNC program, which was started by UNC’s physician, Dr. Donita Kitch, who was diagnosed with cancer at age 15. The program gives young cancer patients access to medical scholarships that they can use toward tuition at UNC for the next four years. Bryson has benefited from the program and was able to start college in the fall. “It was really interesting to me, that they e79caf774b

Keygen cracking releases : Systran v5 Premium Key Generator, Systran v6 Pre.Q: Javascript confirm disappears when loaded from ajax I have a confirmation dialog set up using jQuery: `$("#confirm").confirm({ modal: true, title: "Are you sure?", buttons: { "Yes": function () { alert("hi"); $(this).dialog("close"); }, "No": function () { $(this).dialog("close"); } } });` On page load, it works perfectly and I am able to confirm dialogs. But, if I load another page via ajax, the confirm() dialog disappears and the user can't confirm anything. What is the correct way to prevent this from happening? The second page is loaded via `$.post()`. A: OK, I got it. Posting the answer here just in case anybody else has this problem. The answer is that
