The story begins in the fascinating land of Pahkwa. The benevolent, peaceful, and relatively advanced. The people there know nothing about the barbarian world across the sea. One day, the king is buried in his town, after finding the mother and son dead. His sole surviving son, Gywell, is being brought up by his own mother, to keep the dynasty. The death toll rises in the area around the grave, and the locals accuse a stranger. When Gwywell suddenly disappears, his father orders his search. He is later found by another wanderer, a girl, told: "Who is this King, who is strong enough to kill the Devil?" – At a later point, she herself disappears, too. When the boy and his father arrive in the neighboring tribe, they find out that the inhabitants of the mountain on the horizon, the head man there, possesses supernatural powers, including the ability to move by the power of the wind. He tries to protect Gywell's happiness by informing him of the dangers in the future, and to bring his father as a friend to the magical tribe. All of a sudden, with a fight with the Devil, Gywell and his father are thrown into a different world. However, this world is no enchanted fairy tale kingdom. There is neither happily-ever-after, nor magic – it’s reality in which every struggle between good and evil must be fought, to save the first, and save the last. I hope you will enjoy this adventure.
