Flash mister retro permanent press crack.by Christian Henning Larsen (Editor's note: This article was originally published on MSN Denmark on July 9, 2010. It is republished here with permission of the author.) The former Israeli prime minister, Ehud Barak, describes the lesson of the Three Days of July as being that the Israeli army can deal successfully with Hamas in the West Bank and in Gaza. Barak was prime minister of Israel from 1999 to 2001 and is currently chairman of the Israel Democracy Institute. Barak argues that Israel's counter-terrorism strategy consists of three pillars. Firstly, the Israeli army must manage, together with the Shin Bet and the Israel Defence Force, all the armed actions that threaten the security of Israel. Secondly, it must limit the chances of war. Thirdly, it must be prepared for war. In reality, however, Barak argues, the Israeli army uses all three pillars simultaneously. "That's the thing: we have managed to achieve all three goals with the aid of the security forces and this is a very good thing. The IDF does its job very, very well. On the other hand, it would be naive to believe that at this time, Israel's army is prepared for war in the event of a major escalation," says Barak. "Therefore, in the event of an escalation in the current situation, we must prepare. We must develop plans B, C, D and E, and we must adopt them." Pressed to explain how Israel's army could simultaneously satisfy the three pillars of its counter-terrorism strategy, Barak describes the Israeli response as a "multiplication of difficulties". But he is adamant that Israeli security forces must be able to tackle any Hamas threat. "We must not give in to the mood of despair,"
